

Nimitz MS ISIS Family Module Pilot

What is ISIS (Integrated Student Information System)?

ISIS is a major, web-based, District-wide project, which is integrating student information from early education, to K-12, to adult education into a single database.

What is the ISIS Family Module and Family Module Pilot?

The ISIS Family Module is an online informational tool that will be available to parents/guardians (and, eventually, students). It is an easy way to obtain up-to-the-minute information on your child. Nimitz Middle School was chosen to be one of the pilot schools to try out the ISIS Family Module.

What can you check?

- * During the Pilot: Student attendance and progress report marks
- * In the future: Additional information, including schedules, graduation requirements, and discipline.

When will this be available to me?

Parent/guardian access to the ISIS Family Module is on March 30, 2009.

How will I get access?

You will need to submit an application form to the Attendance Office. Once the Attendance Office verifies the application, we will notify parents.

What training will be available?

Various training methods are being discussed. Working with our parent volunteers, we plan to offer several ways, such as classes, one-on-one, and online instruction.

What else should I know?

Parents/guardians should have basic computer skills before using the Module. For information regarding training and support for Nimitz Middle School's Family Module, please contact the Attendance Office at (323) 887-5400.
